

The hyacinth macaw

The hyacinth macaw is the largest of its species can reach up to 1 meter.

This plumage is fairly uniform intense sky blue , with the beak larger than the other, predominantly black and yellow detail in his jaw.

Unfortunately all species of hyacinth, macaws are endangered in other regions of Brazil, Hunting and unfair man-made devastation of native areas are contributing to that in the coming years has not any more of this beautiful macaw free in nature.

We need to preserve what `s left of our nature,let us be aware and do our part to help our environment so rich in fauna and flora.
