

The Dog Documentary

Por: Antonio G. e Nicolau

The beagle's origin is from Great Britain. The average weight of a male beagle is from 10 to 11 kg and the average weight of a female beagle is from 9 to 11 kg. The beagle's color is usually white, brown and black and their fur is very short and soft. Their height is usually from 33 to 40 cm. They usually have from 2 to 14 puppies. The beagle's life time, if they have a healthy life, is from 12 to 15 years.

An old version of the beagle was the Southern Hound that was found in Ancient Greece around 433 B.C.

The beagle was exported to the United States in 1840, but they were first imported for hunting and they were a variable quality.

The beagle has an even temperament and a gentle disposition. They are kind with humans, easily trainable and have a good sense of smell.

Today many police departments use the good sense of smell of the beagles to find lost things.

The beagle is a very valuable and expensive dog.

The dog you see in this picture is a labrador retriever, it is one of the most common types of domestic dogs.

The labrador retriever's origin is from Canada, it's colors are usually black, brown or palish yellow and they have smooth, short and straight fur.

The average weight of a male labrador is from 27 to 40kg, and the average weight of a female labrador is from 27 to 35 kg.

The average height of a male labrador is from 56 to 63cm, and the average height of a female labrador is from 54 to 60cm.

Labradors are usually big dogs, but they are very kind and outgoing, easily trainable and very intelligent.

Labradors usually have from 5 to 10 puppies. The labrador puppy is usually very playful and agitated.

The labrador retriever's life time is from 10 to 13 years if they have a healthy life with the right physical exercises and feeding.

The labrador retriever is a very antique dog, they come back as early as the 16th century, when the first labradors appeared in Canada.

Despite their origin, they were used by americans at the Vietnam War, the only war americans lost.

The labrador retriever is historically a very famous dog for doing work in the police and is a great guard dog for having a wonderful sense of smell.

Labradors are famous for being guide dogs for blind people because they are very patient.

Labradors are the most popular dogs in many countries, especially France, United States, Finland, Sweden and England.